

Our commitment to you

We will do what we can to support our clients and business contacts over the coming months. This is not about fees or profit, it is about helping our business community survive.

What does that mean?

We want to use our expertise, knowledge and contacts to help you plot your way through these times to a more secure future. We are in regular contact with funders and HMRC.

How does that help me?

We are offering a free business financial diagnostic in order to identify your cash pinch points, methods to mitigate these and can also advise on approaching available funders.

What is a business financial diagnostic?

It is a simple questionnaire for you to complete, followed by a telephone discussion with one of our financial business experts. We hope this will give you more clarity and insight into a range of areas:

Access to funding & grants

Cashflow planning

Customer concentration

Delayed receipts

Reduced sales

Supplier and stock issues

Quarterly pinch points

Fixed cost breakeven

What next?

Our service is completely confidential, without fee or obligation. We want to donate some of our effort to give your business the best chance in these difficult times.

Our corporate finance partner, Paul Mason is leading our efforts to help businesses like yours.
